I just listened to April 24th podcast. The end of it tells us P1, P2, commissions, referrals, missing balances, dailies that were turned to weeklies and due now, plans due now that were converted from alt coins, anything that is due now is in a DO NOW QUE to be paid starting at midnight of the 24th.

The April podcast mentions no favorites for certain clients or those who may have been in longer or shorter times. Must admit I have a challenge with those being in longer not having priority. Seems 8 months veterans of KYC should have priority. Did I just put my neck on the line?

The update of 4/30 stated, in part "We have many payouts going out in batches...". That's pretty clear. Also it was said that people in here have been paid and have not posted it.

Monday another update is coming. My chief concern is regulatory interference. This is what has caused CS to struggle with payments. I hope CS moves off US soil to a more business friendly environment. Then, getting paid will be based on their trade performance, and not exchange impediments.

I have had my say for today. Thank you CS. I know you are doing your best.

Usually when an exchange requests KYC docs, they will limit what you can transfer per day until you provide that information. This could be why payments are queued, until sufficient funds are available to pay. Perhaps the best thing to do is put a payments made indicator on the site, detailing how many payments were made that day. I don't know. Just trying to think of ways to keep people satisfied. We will know more Monday.

I understand your feelings. The last update did say they were being restricted in their ability to get funds out of exchanges and were asked for KYC, (which should remedy the situation). They also clearly said this was affecting their ability to pay on time. But not completely stop payments. So, that's the situation. Perhaps a "payments made today" counter is silly. But people here are so eager to know if "anyone was paid today" I thought it might help. Otherwise, CS will simply have to provide the KYC, get restrictions removed and catch up payments. Another update is due Monday, so let's wait and see.

The update clearly gave a reason for payment slowness - exchange limits on CS, presumably remedied once KYC is given. They are working on solving that. Payments are being made but not "on time". I dont know how much more clearly it could have been stated.

So is the btc that we send in to CS still being used to buy and sell after a plan ends?

For the record - I'm in full support to keep things running as currently operating. I am not a fan of trying to push someone into a corner, especially when the corner pusher has no idea as to what all is being done in their favor and the extensive work being done. There is a lot about this pioneering that most of us don't fully understand. This particular game requires trust and faith. IMO. And Patience. This is coming from someone who has a plan due, others coming due within 10 days. Ignorant demand vailed as questions seems a bit, well, ignorant. Just my two thoughts (about all I have lol)

Yes, Wall Street has not joined the crypto world because it didn't have a way to generate fees from it. While they publicly bash crypto, they have quietly been building the infrastructure to offer trading platforms and other products so that they can generate fees.

Goldman Sachs bought Poloniex.

Fidelity will have a trading and custody platform.

The owner of the NYSE is working on a crypto futures platform Bakkt.

It is rare that us little guys are able to get in before Wall St. but this is our once in a lifetime opportunity :)

Hi mr manager :) can I ask just out of general curiosity what the issue is with telling your amount of BTC or even attaching a screen shot showing that they have been paid? :

It's how many active weeklys I believe

[11:54:06 PM]

BitcoinBarta

Here's one for the square society:

To get the square of any two digit number that ends in five you multiply the first digit by the next highest number and put 25 at the end.

15 squared is one times the next highest number which is two. And 25. So 225

25 squared is 2 times the next highest digit which is 3. So 625

35 squared is $3 \times 4 = 12$. 1225

I don't think they answering Because we all ask the same questions over and over and expect different results

They could do something like a FAQ on the website for all the long term questions (there are many of those).

Other than that, people want to know why CS is allowing people's confidence in them and their system to evaporate. People want to know their money and investment are safe. If people were satisfied by the CS answers to these questions, they wouldn't ask any more.

You have inside knowledge of how to classify whatever CS is doing. Here are my questions:

Can you classify the activity we are actually conducting by entering into a plan with CS? Are we purchasing a product? Are we lending coin to CS for interest? Are we conducting a trade like on an exchange? Is each payment to CS and from CS considered a trade? How are we taxed when BTC received from CS eclipses they amount of bought BTC?

I would strongly appreciate and advocate a podcast or newsletter from your lawyers describing with detail what is actually going on here.

"The super node would be activated and pay all 200 plans simultaneously if over 40,000 unconfirmed transactions"

Admin

I don't know how the supernode would help with unconfirmed transactions though. Each transaction still has to be confirmed by multiple nodes and the other nodes would put CS transactions at the back of the line anyway. Unless they pay more fees to grease it along

But you don't need a supernode for that Great podcast. If we have over 20 btc in the system of exchanges, then what is Circles society's feasible amount for us members to request for withdrawals? My plans are matured but it sounds like CS doesn't like me and they want to keep some of my coins and make me watch it compound? Only thing is I've been watching since August last year and I'm craving crypto proof. I can almost taste it!

[1:24:15 AM]

RFdevil

I agree. I know it was mentioned in the podcast as a bad thing, but I would actually like to see deposits stopped and support suspended until the queue of tickets and payouts is finished and then open it up to new plans. Most people will roll back in anyway and have more confidence to bring in others. Just my opinion.

[1:25:13 AM]

Ostia Commerce

I am purposely curtailing my posts in here to ease the burden on staff and will continue to do so. For the next podcast it may help if this question can be answered: At your present rate of allowable coin withdrawals from your exchanges, and with the fixed number of all overdue account balances known, how much longer should we be prepared to wait for that backlog to be paid off? This is not to put pressure, but perhaps to give the field a realistic understanding and not continually re-ask the "when" question. Just my suggestion, good or bad, I thank you and have a good night.

Thanks alot for the podcast. Great info!!!

Being able to invest in the Circle Society and taking part of this program has had such a great influence in my life. My long-term investment goals have always been huge. My major reason for investing is to be able to provide for my future generations. I want to ensure that my small children and eventually my grandchildren will have a bright and prosperous future. To do that, there is no other opportunity as great as what CS has offered. I have been a part of CS for a while now and have been able to grow my initial investment exponentially. To say I am grateful cannot express enough gratitude for this opportunity in my life. Another major reason that I wanted to invest in CS was to provide an opportunity to establish my family and give them a good life. Thanks alot CS!!

I recall they mentioned it, but don't know when it will be implemented. Most days they have mentioned about how many payments go out. I believe it was 300 Monday and 200 Tuesday, but that's my own recollection, you would have to research the post yourself for an accurate answer.

May I post a dumb question that I can't figure out. Maybe you guys can decipher.

Hypothetically, there are 5000 coins in CS that are due.

Exchanges release up to 1250 coins/week

CS pays the 1000, the rest for the bot to trade.

Outstanding coins to be paid out now is 4000.

Yet these 4000 get rolled into another plan, bringing the balance back up.

Would the que somehow get caught up based on exchange limitation?

My question directed towards members. I agree with podcast that CS staff needs their time to concentrate.

So Bri or CS support none of my coin is being grown rn just waiting held in limbo... rollover coming soon and withdrawals?

Once a plan expires, there's no more growth on that coin for the member, the balance stays the same until payout actually happens

That's what I've seen with my accounts and others I know of

I agree with you. The frustration is we are given the run around day in and day out while all our coin is sitting there. Someone must be playing monopoly with it and it sure isn't us.

I fundamentally disagree about the investment length analogies. Any prospective investment should be analyzed by not only ROI but also ROR and risk factor. The ROR is what made CS so attractive. But if payments keep getting pushed, ROR gets worse and worse and so the investment analysis has to change. This would go for any investment.

Yes, I have the bitcoin ready to go, but intuition tells me to hold onto it and wait for past due balance to be paid out first. Probably why so few people have jumped on the new daily's. Only 28 right now.

I think its random and not necessarily since dailies are getting paid when weekly and matured plans are not

But could be wrong and maybe there is a specific lineup in the queue

What difference does the value of the coin make? We were all given an estimated pay out date of 7 days, 30 days or whatever and CS has grossly missed those dates. How can you possibly tell someone they need to have a long term investment mindset when the original deal was to pay whatever percent interest back to the person in 7 days? That is not a long term investment. It is a very short term investment. It is not a year over year investment.

What difference does the value of the coin make? We were all given an estimated pay out date of 7 days, 30 days or whatever and Valid point, seen plenty saying this is long term... but 7 days is 7 days... 38 is 38.

Is that stating the obvious :joy:

[10:36:32 PM]

MrIrish

If I had someone who asked me to invest in their company and they would pay me back in 7 days at what point am I allowed to ask him for the real answer about where the money is? 30 days later, 60 days later, 180 days later? Remember he agreed to pay me back in 7 days. And how in the world am I (the investor) considered the jerk and treated like crap because I would like a truthful answer about what really happened to my money? If you are hanging onto it (interest free) so that you can continue to trade and make more money for the company, then just say that. Just tell us that you are unwilling to pay us back and that you want to keep making money with our coin. We would rather have the truth than a bunch of smoke screens.

The point is the dates when investors were supposed to get the money back has not been met. We're all here because of the returns yes but when a date is said that's what the investor expects. If it was going to be 1 year for 250% or whatever then we would wait a year but when a plan was supposed to pay in 18 days 10 months ago investors get upset.

[10:42:46 PM]

Zackery Hunter

The returns are 0 until you are actually paid. And the amount of the return is irrelevant. They choose to offer the return of their own choosing. We decide if we want to invest on those terms or not. We all obviously agreed to those stated terms and so did they. However, they do not hold up their end of the bargain and then get super defensive when we ask where the money is. Whether they choose to give you 1% return or 1,000% return is irrelevant. I understand that the payout dates are 'estimated' but no one can make an argument that 8 months overdue on a 7 day investment is acceptable.

Especially when they choose to take in new money and pay that out immediately.

[10:45:30 PM]

Evan S

The returns are 0 until you are actually paid. And the amount of the return is irrelevant. They choose to offer the return of the 1,000,000% agree period. The investment term was stated as such, it's irrelevant that other investors don't produce what CS is stating. If CS said 7 days and paid on day 8 (24 hours after the bot ends) but some other investment will only do 1% in those 7 days where CS does 25% then that argument is relevant.

[10:45:44 PM]

Kris

What I heard in the podcast was they "need new coin to keep the lights on". Is CS not making a profit from coin already in the system? Not making profit from all the missing payouts? If you are offering "returns that you will not see anywhere else," are you not making profits that cannot be made anywhere else?

Last pennies no. There comes a point when you don't throw more money at a problem just because it appears appealing. Not being paid in 10 months for 40 day plans, given excuses why it's not paid, should give pause to anyone thinking of putting more money in.

[5:36:09 PM]

As coin becomes available to pay out from the exchanges, the system builds a batch of us randomly to come up with a group of people that equal the amount of coin available to pay out. That batch is then paid out. There is no real "positions in line", so to speak.

It has been suggested that people are paid in order of who has been waiting the longest, or whose plan matured first Etc, but that would require stopping payments for several days while new code was written.

It's a slap in the face for the people who were in dailies. Dailies stopped, got converted and put into a weekly queue. And then you started dailies again and start paying new plans. Sc has to see how that looks to us

Funny how new coin gets rewarded and paid on time perfectly but all past coin that has been waiting for 11 months to be paid is "in que" for some magical date in the future, "tomorrow" "next week" "later today" "it will be paid, I promise" "Gotta keep the lights on." How about paying the investment in the timeframe that was promised. It's WAY past the 3-5 day grace period, about 330 days past.

What does that mean specifically? Cause this is a question that tons of us have. Does that mean coin from the new Daily's was placed into a different exchange from where other funds were placed? If so, then how can you guarantee that this exchange won't have the same problem as previous ones?

Can you explain this further? Supposedly exchange diversity already happened before the first daily plans started. Why didn't that seem to help at all? There are only so many legitimate exchanges to choose from, why is the new exchange different than the old one?

[8:38:32 PM]

Lacey Boam

But are they from the same exchange? Bri just stated that the daily's were not put in to the same system that has the issues. So for the old dailys converted to weekly's, why would they be in the sme exchange with P1. Not trying to cause an issue by any means, just trying to make sure I'm understanding. i'd wait on the reply, every time you reply to a ticket, it gets put backwards in the cue, considering we had around 300 come in over the weekend, that could set your ticket which was 5/6 back, 306 tickets back why would you mirror an overseas site?

If you proclaim as the website says you are trading then why would you not have the accounts you have be audited and be reporting how much you make and withdraw and then when you pay out send out the 1099 or K1 for the taxes like all the other companies that take and trade on clients behalf. If you are paying out then it does not matter what people have filed at what government agency. You will be able to pass scrutiny by paying people out instead of just taking in tokens and rolling them over.

@techman2020 MS twin here.

First off thank you for all the exhausting work you and your team are doing. I'm glad to be part of your family and hope to be able to play in your field a long time.

? - from a business perspective is it a viable option to dumb down everything and have it operate at a lower payout level, one that matches the estimated rate of pay the exchanges can produce, and turn the tide involving all the people that have less than 100% trust in you and the system. For a 30 - 90 day period. (I understand you could choose to, as el presidente, continue VIP as desired)
2nd ? - Is there a better screening process for members joining (perhaps less enticing commissions as it appears that there are a few get rich quick members) so that there is way to have less time handling questions and way more time focusing on solving the unforeseen growth issues. @techman2020

No questions for me. It's been a long road but I've received multiple payments (to include my P1 back in March) and some earlier pre-KYC payments too. I just want to say THANK YOU to you and the CS Staff. I could be bitching and complaining about my rollover and wondering where is it. I know it's coming and heck, if I would have received it on May 3rd... it would have been a lot less than what BTC is at currently. So call this what you want, kissing ass, brown nosing, whatever... I appreciated this company and want you to know there is one less person complaining about CS. Life is too short to be angry, DON'T GET DISCOURAGED! I'm sure everyone in here is a gambler and takes risks. Well taking a breath of air IS the ultimate risk... let this OPPORTUNITY work itself out and stop stressing so much! OUT!

You mentioned before part of the problem with the exchanges is the information they are now requesting..ie W-9, coin history. Is that still the case and could we voluntarily send in that info if we don't mind doing it? Or, would it even help if all aren't willing?

I personally like the idea of the one plan idea paying variable daily, especially if it can be implemented in a reasonable amount of time and pays daily without a queue. I presume the balance used to calculate the variable daily payment would be the sum of the "Return Amount" showing in our plans list.

Agree, all of cs has acted accordingly as family, thank you

[2:35:33 AM]

Jared

So what I summarized from the lengthy and thorough update (Thanks Techman)

Is Patience is just something we all have to endure for a little while longer...

And anyone who might of had concerns or worries about coin not being in place or CS being something other than authentic can rest a little better tonight...

I really hope everyone can take to heart what they heard and do their best to hold in a little longer...

I've been frustrated as anyone... And I have 16 people to manage within my group... so I'm only sharing the philosophy that I've cultivated throughout this experience which has brought me peace of mind, because there was quite a while there where I went without it.

Excited about the coming transitions and what it means for us in the long term... 🤔

Separate email would mean having to get everyone in the know about it which is honestly a nightmare, but currently we usually send someone to scan through them to pull out a bunch of rollovers, if you put rollover in the first line it makes it super easy to see

Hello, I submitted a ticket yesterday (5-14) to rollover an amount into an Endgame Plan from my rollover amount balance which ended on 5-2. I requested to rollover some BTC into an ENDGAME PLAN and leave some still for withdraw. I know you have hundreds of tickets to go through... My question is once you get to my ticket and say you honor my request, will my Endgame plan be retroactive to the date (5-14) it was requested on when I submitted the ticket or will my plan start the day you get to my ticket and honor the request?

Thank you for all the continued efforts!

For U.S. citizens, you mentioned yesterday about 1099 and W9 forms. First, what is the threshold amount to receive a 1099 from CS? Second, the W9 is required for any payment over 2.5 BTC? Or is the W9 only for withdrawal (refund) requests and not for ongoing plan payouts for continuing members? Thank you.

Hey @techman2020 !

Following question regarding W-9 form;

Did I understand yesterday's podcast correct, in order for CS to pay us out above the equivalent of $20,000 we are required to submit a W-9 form? So if my current balance due is for example 10BTC, I would only be able to get about 2.5BTC at current price? Or does the $20,000 include ALL payouts received since joining CS?

Could you expand on the mention of a "balloon payment" that is due from Kucoin and what it will mean for P1?

Bonus: if it will create a significant payout for the 300ish people waiting for P1 could you say a % of how much the balloon payment will cover?

@techman2020

Could you provide 100% clarity on - do we need to have a w9 on file w CS to see any payout over 2.5 btc?

Yesterday you mentioned that there was one account holder that had 9999 BTC. I think you also said that there was over 10,000 BTC in all of CS's exchanges. So what I heard (which may be wrong) is that CS barely has enough coin to cover that one account if and whenever they decide to the previous dailies were converted to weeklies so free up the system. Why are dailies now back on the table (other than because everyone likes them?). I assume they are automated payments once you hit the button however if they involve any manual work I can't imagine how much hassle that is. Isn't lesser transactions easier for you? I think most people would be fine with a weekly payout if it was like clockwork...

Good day @techman2020

I'm wondering if you can give any insight into reporting CS gains for tax purposes? From what I've been able to gather on different tax topics, mining income is recognized once it hits a wallet. My thought process is that the CS payment value at the time they are received minus the value of the coin at the time it is sent to CS equals reportable investment gain/loss. Just want to avoid getting on the wrong side of the tax man. Asking for a friend ;-)

@techman2020 in regards to the W9, I can certainly understand the need if CS were paying out earnings in fiat similar to an exchange you would be sending out 1099 forms at the end of the year. My knowledge is that is only needed for BTC to fiat conversions similar to the one I received from Gemini for all the fiat I received from them last year only for BTC that I sold through the exchange. Are you certain this is a requirement for BTC earnings needing to be reported to the IRS? My CPA is telling me only if you sold it for fiat it's reportable. Please clarify.

Thank you admin for all your answers!

My question: With your last podcast fully addressing the if and when of payouts, now I am down to how - specifically regarding taxation. Could you please either ask your corporate accountant or have him join you in podcast to help bridge the following: a move from CS wallet to my wallet, if above $20K in fiat value triggers a W-9 and 1099 on your side - a taxable event for CS. If I was to rollover a plan (YOP) that expired in the last week of April, into endgame, would the start date of that plan be from the day I rolled over? Or when the YOP matured? I've been missing a lot of growth during that time. I thought it was best to wait a couple days but should've rolled it over

[8:42:47 PM]

Scott Preston

Hello @techman2020

Scott in Oregon here

My question is:

Would it help to get paid out sooner of some amount if we lowered our amount due by rolling over partial balances? I have a Weekly and a rollover (P2) that still show their plan names & expiration dates not "balance due" same with my referral. Does that indicate that our accounts have not even been considered yet for payout? I suppose knowing where we stand in relation to payment queue and the possibility of realizing what we see onscreen would put most of us in a more relaxed mindset. Setting realistic expectations is critical for good business. I still don't have a good feel for why there is so much trouble with the exchanges. Thank you.

While we are waiting on a final confirmation from our tax attorney, I'll share what I have dealt with from past experiences. A 1099 is sent annually to an investor based on payouts received against the current fiat at the time of withdrawal. Aka...if you withdraw one coin, and if BTC was $4000 at the time of withdrawal to your wallet, you will be taxed on $4000. This works the same way as stocks and other commodities. To file you will need your 1099 and a 1040 schedule D form. You are required to list your investments in fiat value. And if you are thinking the IRS doesn't get crypto.. be aware, as if this year, you can now receive your tax refunds in Bitcoin.

Circle is required by law to report to the IRS , the amount paid per annum, to its members. A w9 is required so that taxes can be filed appropriately and correctly for the individuals or organizations. Failure failure to report accurately to the IRS, would placeCircle Society in violation of tax law..

And nobody wants that to happen.

Because the IRS classifies cryptocurrency as "property," every exchange of cryptocurrency is a taxable event, even if it does not involve fiat

Once our W-9 has been received. Will we start receiving payments. Or will we be stuck waiting for everyone to submit their W-9s as well.

Also, I understand the coins being withheld by Kucoin not paying out, but how does that hold up our payouts on new coin plans (such as the dailies that were converted) that had nothing to do with the kucoin related funds. It is reasonable to expect that those being new funds should be available for immediate payout once a W-9 is received.

Didn't get a chance to ask during the question time.

Hi Techman

According to your previous podcast, you stated that all plans will be combined to one balance and will be paid perpetually between 1% to 3% (give or take) each day. From my understanding you will start paying that way between June 12th to 15th. Is this still the plan or is there a change of plan on payouts and dates? Also, the dailies have all been paid mostly on time recently. Will these payouts also hit our wallet as fast as the dailies? Thank you Techman, I know even though its been a wait, its worth it! You are the man and shout out to the entire CS team for their hard work!!!

Admin in a previous Q and A you said if we hadn't received any feedback on a ticket after 48 hours send an email/ticket for further info. So on 5/17 I sent in an email to "manager@circlesociety.com" asking for an update. I'm getting a bit frustrated here. [8:09:50 PM]

Hello

@techman2020

My question.

With the new never ending plan I see an issue with payouts. Lets say I have 20btc and with the range of payments mentioned (.1%-3%). If I got the average everyday of 1.5% even after 365 days of payouts my balance is .08 btc.

That over a year too not even get the full 20btc paid to me. That doesn't include growing the account on any days or days where I get less then the average %. How will that keep us investors happy if its gonna take a year to get my coin?

Keep grinding much appreciated!

Second question. On the perpetual plan. What do you see the growth % of our plan daily? Right now we can do some crazy fast growth but this plan is seems to be reducing the growth by a ton.

Third question.

Wouldn't it be easier and make more sense to keep plans going as is and when a plan finishes it gets added to our account balance in which we can request a withdrawl from. That withdrawl goes into a payment mode which pays out 5-10% daily until Finished? Then the account balance that isn't in withdrawl can be rolled into new plans, etc?

I also hear you saying that payouts are in the queue in the computer but I admit I dont understand how this all works yet which is why I'm seeking some answers. So 3 questions...#1 - are people still getting P1 payouts every day? Im not seeing people posting this anymore on the feed.#2 - if this is computerized why aren't P1 payouts just running all night long instead of only certain times a day? #3- I realize you may not have enough coin to pay everyone out fast so why not have a payment plan so we can all get at least something?

Admin

I have plans that ended may 1st, 3rd, 5th. Seeing how we are in "limbo" why can you not implement rollover buttons for us on all plans so we can roll over our expired plans into the same plan and or another plan of our choosing instead of just Year of Pig and Endgame. This would be no different than us receiving our payment from you and turning around and putting it right back into the system into the plan of our choosing. This way our coin is not just sitting there untill things get back into a normal flow.

[8:23:28 PM]

Riley Schuit

Admin/techman, I'm going to rephrase my question from last time. It sounds like CS needs more staff to answer tickets and technical people to assist you. How can people apply or get involved to be on the team? Many people state not getting answers on tickets and follow ups get unanswered. In my experience, the tickets people _WANT_ to answer, get answered while others stay unanswered (thus people get frustrated). If they need to be escalated, the owner of that ticket simply needs to say something to the requestor.

[8:23:44 PM]

Rob Duncan

Our phase 1 payouts were based on lawyers suggesting that if your account was less than 10 BTC you could withdraw 50%, if it were more than 10 BTC your withdrawal could only be 5%. This decision making was based on keeping the system running solvent and bot performing at its optimum. Was this the case or is this not the case?

Are we able to ever roll existing coin from expired plans to new promotions, plans, or giveaways? Or is this mainly for new coin?

If we don't get paid out by mid June, what will happen then?

I've been rolling over and re investing...

Once plans start paying, I'm expecting some large payouts... will this cause a "flag" on my wallet provider since it's never seen the likes of this size deposit?

Is there a preferred wallet so prevent this, or is it not a worry?

I think once the system is set to pay 1% or similar daily, the wallets shouldn't have an issue. Just thinking out loud...

Admin... I'm glad for this Q&A opportunity. It's a great idea.

1. I need to know, and I know others need to know also when we will be paid our P1 payment??????????

This P1 issue is like a can being kicked down the road endlessly, while other things and other payouts are important, the P1 many of us are owed should be #1.

2. Why can't I get an email or a call about 5 tickets I've sent through proper channels in the last 1.5 months? I have a major discrepancy in my total number of btc that needs action.

Hey guys I submitted a rollover request for one of my expired plans 7 days ago, but havnt heard back nor is it rolled over yet. I know you guys are busy. But would u mind checkin on ticket #8208?

I have another 5 plans that I would also like to roll into endgame, but that is contingent on a response to a question I attached to the rollover request :) I didnt want to open another ticket and risk further delays

For clarity, is it an absolute 100% CS policy from this moment forward that to receive ANYTHING from CS we MUST submit a W9? Even if our CPA's say differently?

If so, how can we get clarity from Ed as to WHY he/CS perceives the W9 to be necessary? What is the actual law or legal precedent being cited? CS members have asked him for clarity on the situation, and his response was for us to check with our CPA's. That did not answer the question @techman2020 For clarity, is it an absolute 100% CS policy from this moment forward that to receive ANYTHING from CS we MUST submit Form W-9 (officially, the "Request for Taxpayer Identification Number and Certification") [1] is used in the United States income tax system by a third party who must file an information return with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). [2] It requests the name, address, and taxpayer identification information of a taxpayer (in the form of a Social Security Number or Employer Identification Number).

The form is never actually sent to the IRS, but is maintained by the individual who files the information return for verification purposes. The information on the Form W-9 and the payment made are reported on a Form 1099.

It clearly states on Kucoin FAQ that 500 coin a day (24hrs) can be withdrawn. You have stated to the contrary. After contacting Kucoin they affirmed yes on 500 coin a day withdrawal. Who is telling the truth ? To clarify Kucoin stated all Verified Institutional accounts 500 BTC and individual 100btc

That's a lot of daily coin that can be paid out.

Like many others, we just want an estimate on payments, and specifically for us, the Balance Due payout time estimate and rollover possibilities.

I believe that paying partial payments to everyone would save you a lot of grief because it would calm everyone down by restoring their faith in cs, knowing that the machine is still operational by something actually happening in lieu of many words repeated.

We contacted support multiple times, at least 72 hours apart asking about rollovers into endgame or another plan with a May 3 start date and the truck with no answer. A rollover button would save you many tickets

Is the Ku Coin exchange coin the only coin P1's are being paid with? If so then 500 coin released per fortnight, or every 2 weeks, should have been approx 3000 coin released for March, April and May. If this is the case, is that not enough to clear P1 balances? Thank you.

Hi Techman, my site never had a balance due. It has "return amount" and dates that are past. I have no roll over button either. Can you please do a written instructions on what I can do from here. How to request withdrawal and what to do if I want to refund lol over but withdraw a portion of the Bitcoin.

@techman2020 I sent 3 tickets in regards to a commission that was not paid March 7th. It has not been paid and no response. How do I handle that issue successfully?

[9:28:34 PM]

Dave Karakas

@techman2020, 2 Questions.

1) When purchasing Plans, each provide the following statement on the purchase page:

"*Payment will be received 24 Business hours after end date"

When will CS be capable of honoring this part of the purchase agreement?

Note: I have a YoP that expired on 4/25. I rolled a portion of it and left some BTC as balance due. The balance due was set to a Est Bot End Date of 5/10 despite actually maturing on 4/25. Its now 5/21 and its unclear when I'll get my balance due payout. This is holding up other investments I would like to be making right now.

2) Since our Dailys were moved into Weeklys, and our Weeklys were moved into Balance Due, why are these not paid within a day or two of maturity? I haven't received a payout since 3/31 and these were all 'Daily' plans.

[9:32:54 PM]

Rick B

@techman2020

When Dailies were introduced for BTC and ETH in March all seemed well and I had a few plans that were paying on time. Life was good. Then the "Solar Flare" hit and caused a major backup/stoppage of payouts. From that, all Dailies were 'Rolled' into Balance Due plans.

Since this was new coin used to buy into those Dailies and not rollover coin, can these be slated for other plan actions, ie payout a percentage of the plan, rollover a percentage, etc. Again, this was new coin and not rollover coin.

Are there any other actions that can be done with these plans besides hurry up and wait, and also get the opportunity to watch other new Dailies be paid while we get to sit on the sidelines?

I believe that many, if not most, will just turn around and join new plans with coins received from a payout.

Andy Novotny here:

My question:

Is this real? We joined this investment group because we trusted the integrity of the individual who referred us (and still do). As a business owner myself, I know that the success of my business is contingent upon my ability to deliver the goods or services that I'm offering. When I deliver what is expected (promised), I get repeat business and referrals for new clients. Everybody wins. If I don't follow through, I get neither.

I've been told by people who claim to know you that "dishonesty is not in your DNA", and I have been clinging to that. I understand that there are technical issues and/or regulation changes that you encounter that cause hiccups to your business model. Do you have backup plans in place for these situations or are you doing everything "on the fly"?

I want this to work. I want to reinvest. I want to trust that you will do what you say you are going to do when you say that you are going to do it. But I need evidence, consistency. Going forward, will you deliver that? How?

Admin,

Question #1, about support tickets. According to several podcasts, CS support is overwhelmed by support tickets and many members submit the same thing multiple times. My experience is that when I submit a ticket, my webpage doesn't change. Would it be possible to program in a banner or something letting us know the request has been submitted? Would it be possible to receive an email shortly after reaffirming that it was received?

Question #2, about rollover button, is it going to be available soon? This seems to be one of the common requests that I have heard. Might alleviate several support requests.

Thank you.

The update of 4/30 stated, in part "We have many payouts going out in batches...". That's pretty clear. Also it was said that people in here have been paid and have not posted it.

Monday another update is coming. My chief concern is regulatory interference. This is what has caused CS to struggle with payments. I hope CS moves off US soil to a more business friendly environment. Then, getting paid will be based on their trade performance, and not exchange impediments.

Usually when an exchange requests KYC docs, they will limit what you can transfer per day until you provide that information. This could be why payments are queued, until sufficient funds are available to pay. Perhaps the best thing to do is put a payments made indicator on the site, detailing how many payments were made that day. I don't know. Just trying to think of ways to keep people satisfied. We will know more Monday.

I understand your feelings. The last update did say they were being restricted in their ability to get funds out of exchanges and were asked for KYC, (which should remedy the situation). They also clearly said this was affecting their ability to pay on time. But not completely stop payments. So, that's the situation. Perhaps a "payments made today" counter is silly. But people here are so eager to know if "anyone was paid today" I thought it might help.

Otherwise, CS will simply have to provide the KYC, get restrictions removed and catch up payments. Another update is due Monday, so let's wait and see.

Thank you CS for the further updates on the situation. I am satisfied with the answers and grateful for all of your efforts.

I don't think individuals that posed questions are necessarily demanding anything. Most often just confused with the given updates.

I for one suffers concussions so information can be fragmented. Thank you members for helping to answer as well.

I never asked about being paid, but rather the challenges that CS faces.

It has nothing to do with the 3 traits you spoke of. It's about showing members that payouts happen. Name calling should've been fixed at home by age 4.

I think it would be very wise policy that CS exercise their right to place all who are displeased into a refund queue, remove them from this chat and ease the burden of dealing with the dissatisfied minority. This is not meant to be mean spirited, but to deliver satisfaction all around and allow CS to focus on solving the day to day issues on the outside. With that, I am going to say good afternoon and hope you all are well.

Thank you for your continued efforts... been in this since May of 2018 and have received multiple payments (not exactly on time but received eventually). I've had the opportunity to meet you in person and can attest that you are very generous with your time and this opportunity you have shared with so many. It is life changing for many.

Focus on the future success of CS and know that the majority are in this for the long term investment opportunity and support you and your team.

Weed out the few complainers (refund and closed acct) and move on... especially anyone who has violated terms and conditions of being a CS member.

My plans mature tomorrow. I'll make sure my wallet address is up to date and check back in a few days. I'll be reinvesting 99% to continue growing my egg. :

Yes, Wall Street has not joined the crypto world because it didn't have a way to generate fees from it. While they publicly bash crypto, they have quietly been building the infrastructure to offer trading platforms and other products so that they can generate fees.

Goldman Sachs bought Poloniex.

Fidelity will have a trading and custody platform.

The owner of the NYSE is working on a crypto futures platform Bakkt.

It is rare that us little guys are able to get in before Wall St. but this is our once in a lifetime opportunity :)

Hi mr manager :) can I ask just out of general curiosity what the issue is with telling your amount of BTC or even attaching a screen shot showing that they have been paid? Here's one for the square society:

To get the square of any two digit number that ends in five you multiply the first digit by the next highest number and put 25 at the end.

15 squared is one times the next highest number which is two. And 25. So 225

25 squared is 2 times the next highest digit which is 3. So 625

35 squared is $3 \times 4 = 12$. 1225

They could do something like a FAQ on the website for all the long term questions (there are many of those).

Other than that, people want to know why CS is allowing people's confidence in them and their system to evaporate. People want to know their money and investment are safe. If people were satisfied by the CS answers to these questions, they wouldn't ask any more.

The more often u ask, The earlier it gets paid out.

[10:09:54 PM]

Ivan

I thought the point of weekly was to avoid the daily problem but if they're offering dailies again and are confident that daily payments start tomorrow then how come the weekly hasnt been payed out? Or does this mean it's all coming tomorrow along with daily payout

All my weeklies were grouped in one payout it looks like. When it pays out, how long do I have to invest in another plan? Don't want my account to be deactivated if it takes me a few hours to realize I've been paid and reinvest.

You have inside knowledge of how to classify whatever CS is doing. Here are my questions:

Can you classify the activity we are actually conducting by entering into a plan with CS? Are we purchasing a product? Are we lending coin to CS for interest? Are we conducting a trade like on an exchange? Is each payment to CS and from CS considered a trade? How are we taxed when BTC received from CS eclipses they amount of bought BTC?

I would strongly appreciate and advocate a podcast or newsletter from your lawyers describing with detail what is actually going on here.

If 200 payments can be handled, why is there such a delay in all the payments being sent out?

Didn't he say they're not even using the node right now?

"The super node would be activated and pay all 200 plans simultaneously if over 40,000 unconfirmed transactions"

Admin

I don't know how the supernode would help with unconfirmed transactions though. Each transaction still has to be confirmed by multiple nodes and the other nodes would put CS transactions at the back of the line anyway. Unless they pay more fees to grease it along

But you don't need a supernode for that

[11:52:34 PM]

Kris

Again, that does not classify the activity we are conducting on CS. Tax specifics vary, not US tax law itself, state yes, US no. The activity performed here does not vary.

[11:54:04 PM]

A Rogers

Taxes still don't or won't apply if you haven't received any payouts. I'll worry about that when it shows

[11:54:38 PM]

Ivan

I know we still have to wait for podcast and maybe it will hold the answers but weeklies are scheduled to pay the latest tomorrow along with dailies? Since the point of converting to weekly was to minimize individual daily payment into one chunk so that we can all receive payment on time?

[11:54:39 PM]

Kris

I agree. I know it was mentioned in the podcast as a bad thing, but I would actually like to see deposits stopped and support suspended until the queue of tickets and payouts is finished and then open it up to new plans. Most people will roll back in anyway and have more confidence to bring in others. Just my opinion.

[1:25:13 AM]

I am purposely curtailing my posts in here to ease the burden on staff and will continue to do so. For the next podcast it may help if this question can be answered: At your present rate of allowable coin withdrawals from your exchanges, and with the fixed number of all overdue account balances known, how much longer should we be prepared to wait for that backlog to be paid off? This is not to put pressure, but perhaps to give the field a realistic understanding and not continually re-ask the "when" question. Just my suggestion, good or bad, I thank you and have a good night.

Thanks alot for the podcast. Great info!!!

Being able to invest in the Circle Society and taking part of this program has had such a great influence in my life. My long-term investment goals have always been huge. My major reason for investing is to be able to provide for my future generations. I want to ensure that my small children and eventually my grandchildren will have a bright and prosperous future. To do that, there is no other opportunity as great as what CS has offered. I have been a part of CS for a while now and have been able to grow my initial investment exponentially. To say I am grateful cannot express enough gratitude for this opportunity in my life. Another major reason that I wanted to invest in CS was to provide an opportunity to establish my family and give them a good life. Thanks alot CS!!

Question on Daily Match... if 1BTC invested in Daily does it become 2 BTC and pay 5% per day on 2 BTC .. ie Daily payment of 0.1

They create a second 1 BTC plan they both pay out .05 weekdays, effectively .1 each day.

Me too

CS keeps saying that it is an investment (long term). The question is how long?

I haven't gotten a strait answer.

I recall they mentioned it, but don't know when it will be implemented. Most days they have mentioned about how many payments go out. I believe it was 300 Monday and 200 Tuesday, but that's my own recollection, you would have to research the post yourself for an accurate answer.

[5:48:13 PM]

rain_coin

May I post a dumb question that I can't figure out. Maybe you guys can decipher.

Hypothetically, there are 5000 coins in CS that are due.

Exchanges release up to 1250 coins/week

CS pays the 1000, the rest for the bot to trade.

Outstanding coins to be paid out now is 4000.

Yet these 4000 get rolled into another plan, bringing the balance back up.

Would the que somehow get caught up based on exchange limitation?

My question directed towards members. I agree with podcast that CS staff needs their time to concentrate.

Once a plan expires, there's no more growth on that coin for the member, the balance stays the same until payout actually happens

I fundamentally disagree about the investment length analogies. Any prospective investment should be analyzed by not only ROI but also ROR and risk factor. The ROR is what made CS so attractive. But if payments keep getting pushed, ROR gets worse and worse and so the investment analysis has to change. This would go for any investment.

What difference does the value of the coin make? We were all given an estimated pay out date of 7 days, 30 days or whatever and CS has grossly missed those dates. How can you possibly tell someone they need to have a long term investment mindset when the original deal was to pay whatever

If I had someone who asked me to invest in their company and they would pay me back in 7 days at what point am I allowed to ask him for the real answer about where the money is? 30 days later, 60 days later, 180 days later? Remember he agreed to pay me back in 7 days. And how in the world am I (the investor) considered the jerk and treated like crap because I would like a truthful answer about what really happened to my money? If you are hanging onto it (interest free) so that you can continue to trade and make more money for the company, then just say that. Just tell us that you are unwilling to pay us back and that you want to keep making money with our coin. We would rather have the truth than a bunch of smoke screens.

The point is the dates when investors were supposed to get the money back has not been met. We're all here because of the returns yes but when a date is said that's what the investor expects. If it was going to be 1 year for 250% or whatever then we would wait a year but when a plan was supposed to pay in 18 days 10 months ago investors get upset.

The returns are 0 until you are actually paid. And the amount of the return is irrelevant. They choose to offer the return of their own choosing. We decide if we want to invest on those terms or not. We all obviously agreed to those stated terms and so did they. However, they do not hold up their end of the bargain and then get super defensive when we ask where the money is. Whether they choose to give you 1% return or 1,000% return is irrelevant. I understand that the payout dates are 'estimated' but no one can make an argument that 8 months overdue on a 7 day investment is acceptable. Especially when they choose to take in new money and pay that out immediately.

[10:45:30 PM]

The returns are 0 until you are actually paid. And the amount of the return is irrelevant. They choose to offer the return of the 1,000,000% agree period. The investment term was stated as such, it's irrelevant that other investors don't produce what CS is stating. If CS said 7 days and paid on day 8 (24 hours after the bot ends) but some other investment will only do 1% in those 7 days where CS does 25% then that argument is relevant.

[10:45:44 PM]

What I heard in the podcast was they "need new coin to keep the lights on". Is CS not making a profit from coin already in the system? Not making profit from all the missing payouts? If you are offering "returns that you will not see anywhere else," are you not making profits that cannot be made anywhere else?

the constant attacking occurring in this feed is not appreciated whilst the staff is

That's a strong possibility

It would be great to have a ticker that states how many of what plans were paid the previous 24 hours. I would love to say that would make people feel better. But, I can only speak for me and my group. I know my group would love a daily update like that.

[5:35:31 PM]

Good to know about daily. But my P1 and P2 have not been paid. Also all the individual I know haven't gotten paid. So all this people are not in the so called random list. Also there is no random in a computer. Computer does what you program. Please stop with the BS.

Last pennies no. There comes a point when you don't throw more money at a problem just because it appears appealing. Not being paid in 10 months for 40 day plans, given excuses why it's not paid, should give pause to anyone thinking of putting more money in.

[5:36:09 PM]

Colin Mac

Is that a comment in regards to silencing me. I've put enough into CS to have concerns over not having any return and if I have a question in regards to putting coins into a daily... then I think I'm entitled to ask... with a slight negative twist due to previous form.

I wasn't relieving frustration, I was asking a question as I'm basically about to or planning to getting on the daily train but it would be nice to be given confidence instead of someone jumping on about silencing me... and 4 others :blush:

As coin becomes available to pay out from the exchanges, the system builds a batch of us randomly to come up with a group of people that equal the amount of coin available to pay out. That batch is then paid out. There is no real "positions in line", so to speak.

It has been suggested that people are paid in order of who has been waiting the longest, or whose plan matured first Etc, but that would require stopping payments for several days while new code was written.

[5:42:16 PM]

Yes that is such a great idea so we don't have to read throw nonsense, bickering and social conversations from others.

It's a slap in the face for the people who were in dailies. Dailies stopped, got converted and put into a weekly queue. And then you started dailies again and start paying new plans. Sc has to see how that looks to us

[5:59:16 PM]

Evan S

Funny how new coin gets rewarded and paid on time perfectly but all past coin that has been waiting for 11 months to be paid is "in que" for some magical date in the future, "tomorrow" "next week" "later today" "it will be paid, I promise" "Gotta keep the lights on." How about paying the investment in the timeframe that was promised. It's WAY past the 3-5 day grace period, about 330 days past.

My question is: If I request a refund, how immediate is it? Will I just be put into the que again? Will it be exactly like waiting for the payout? I don't Want to request a refund if it will be the same amount of time, obviously the payout will be worth much more then the refund of my original investment.

[10:14:44 PM]

@techman2020 Supposedly exchange diversity already happened before the first daily plans started. Why didn't that seem to help at all? There are only so many legitimate exchanges to choose from, why is the new exchange that is paying out daily different than the old one?

@techman2020

in the "good old days" of dailies w China it was routine that 50-300btc plans where freely given out

Almost a 1,000 btc worth.

My question:

If there was that much coin available to give out -

Why has P1 been so underfunded and what immediate actions are being done to remedy pass due?

(Beyond the "exchanges are holding all our coin" response)

My question is since I'm just getting started trying to get funds together to get into this match coin plan If the slots expire and I'm unable are you planning to make more? Or do I have to wait for payouts before more become available?

Also are the daily's-the only plans paying out at this time?

The returns stated without the match are more than generous as they are and they can't be found elsewhere? Not a popular suggestion or question to be sure, but I think could solve some immediate issues.

Is it better to cease rollover in the meantime until payment is caught up? why would you mirror an overseas site?

If you proclaim as the website says you are trading then why would you not have the accounts you have be audited and be reporting how much you make and withdraw and then when you pay out send out the 1099 or K1 for the taxes like all the other companies that take and trade on clients behalf. If you are paying out then it does not matter what people have filed at what government agency. You will be able to pass scrutiny by paying people out instead of just taking in tokens and rolling them over.

There was a podcast or post here or the old thread about everyone being required to use a VPN, what's the latest with that?

Also I believe it would put a bunch of people at ease if at the end of every week or day there was a total of how many of each type was paid. i.e. P1, past plans and balanced due. We don't care particularly care how much coin just the number of transactions.

My question, regarding the feed and CS in general, your transparency and openness is quite appreciated - but there must be limits.

As far as those who openly accuse CS of fraud or criminal activity, can they be removed from the feed and placed on refund status so the rest of us adults can have a civil conversation and participate without a minority of people making it unbearable to be involved?

First off thank you for all the exhausting work you and your team are doing. I'm glad to be part of your family and hope to be able to play in your field a long time.

? - from a business perspective is it a viable option to dumb down everything and have it operate at a lower payout level, one that matches the estimated rate of pay the exchanges can produce, and turn the tide involving all the people that have less than 100% trust in you and the system. For a 30 - 90 day period. (I understand you could choose to, as el presidente, continue VIP as desired)
2nd ? - Is there a better screening process for members joining (perhaps less enticing commissions as it appears that there are a few get rich quick members) so that there is way to have less time handling questions and way more time focusing on solving the unforeseen growth issues. I know you've mentioned that something like 70% of the invested comes from only a few clients that offer no complaints...

Hi CS, great podcast - I really appreciate it.

My questions are:

You mentioned that all account balances could be rolled into a unique perpetual daily that would pay out between 0.1%-5% depending on the account balance. I think that's a great idea! How fast could you start doing that? If you could do that, that is a huge thing! Would our investment still continue to grow? Could you please define the account balance brackets at which each percentage would be paid?

I just want to say THANK YOU to you and the CS Staff. I could be bitching and complaining about my rollover and wondering where is it. I know it's coming and heck, if I would have received it on May 3rd... it would have been a lot less than what BTC is at currently. So call this what you want, kissing ass, brown nosing, whatever... I appreciated this company and want you to know there is one less person complaining about CS. Life is too short to be angry, DON'T GET DISCOURAGED! I personally like the idea of the one plan idea paying variable daily, especially if it can be implemented in a reasonable amount of time and pays daily without a queue. So what I summarized from the lengthy and thorough update (Thanks Techman)

Is Patience is just something we all have to endure for a little while longer...

And anyone who might of had concerns or worries about coin not being in place or CS being something other than authentic can rest a little better tonight...

I really hope everyone can take to heart what they heard and do their best to hold in a little longer...

I've been frustrated as anyone... And I have 16 people to manage within my group... so I'm only sharing the philosophy that I've cultivated throughout this experience which has brought me peace of mind, because there was quite a while there where I went without it.

Excited about the coming transitions and what it means for us in the long term... 🤗

Separate email would mean having to get everyone in the know about it which is honestly a nightmare, but currently we usually send someone to scan through them to pull out a bunch of rollovers, if you put rollover in the first line it makes it super easy to see

Hello, I submitted a ticket yesterday (5-14) to rollover an amount into an Endgame Plan from my rollover amount balance which ended on 5-2. I requested to rollover some BTC into an ENDGAME PLAN and leave some still for withdraw. I know you have hundreds of tickets to go through... My question is once you get to my ticket and say you honor my request, will my Endgame plan be retroactive to the date (5-14) it was requested on when I submitted the ticket or will my plan start the day you get to my ticket and honor the request?

Thank you for all the continued efforts!

For U.S. citizens, you mentioned yesterday about 1099 and W9 forms. First, what is the threshold amount to receive a 1099 from CS? Second, the W9 is required for any payment over 2.5 BTC? Or is the W9 only for withdrawal (refund) requests and not for ongoing plan payouts for continuing members? Thank you.

Hey @techman2020 !

Following question regarding W-9 form;

Did I understand yesterday's podcast correct, in order for CS to pay us out above the equivalent of $20,000 we are required to submit a W-9 form? So if my current balance due is for example 10BTC, I would only be able to get about 2.5BTC at current price? Or does the $20,000 include ALL payouts received since joining CS?

[8:04:40 PM]

Bonus: if it will create a significant payout for the 300ish people waiting for P1 could you say a % of how much the balloon payment will cover?

@techman2020

Yesterday you mentioned that there was one account holder that had 9999 BTC. I think you also said that there was over 10,000 BTC in all of CS's exchanges. So what I heard (which may be wrong) is that CS barely has enough coin to cover that one account if and whenever they decide to withdraw.

the previous dailies were converted to weeklies so free up the system. Why are dailies now back on the table (other than because everyone likes them?). I assume they are automated payments once you hit the button however if they involve any manual work I can't imagine how much hassle that is. Isn't lesser transactions easier for you? I think most people would be fine with a weekly payout if it was like clockwork...

I'm wondering if you can give any insight into reporting CS gains for tax purposes? From what I've been able to gather on different tax topics, mining income is recognized once it hits a wallet. My thought process is that the CS payment value at the time they are received minus the value of the coin at the time it is sent to CS equals reportable investment gain/loss. Just want to avoid getting on the wrong side of the tax man. Asking for a friend ;-)

@techman2020 in regards to the W9, I can certainly understand the need if CS were paying out earnings in fiat similar to an exchange you would be sending out 1099 forms at the end of the year. My knowledge is that is only needed for BTC to fiat conversions similar to the one I received from Gemini for all the fiat I received from them last year only for BTC that I sold through the exchange. Are you certain this is a requirement for BTC earnings needing to be reported to the IRS? My CPA is telling me only if you sold it for fiat it's reportable. Please clarify.

Thank you admin for all your answers!

My question: With your last podcast fully addressing the if and when of payouts, now I am down to how - specifically regarding taxation. Could you please either ask your corporate accountant or have him join you in podcast to help bridge the following: a move from CS wallet to my wallet, if above $20K in fiat value triggers a W-9 and 1099 on your side - a taxable event for CS. Scott Preston

Hello @techman2020

Scott in Oregon here

My question is:

Would it help to get paid out sooner of some amount if we lowered our amount due by rolling over partial balances? I have a Weekly and a rollover (P2) that still show their plan names & expiration dates not "balance due" same with my referral. Does that indicate that our accounts have not even been considered yet for payout? I suppose knowing where we stand in relation to payment queue and the possibility of realizing what we see onscreen would put most of us in a more relaxed mindset. Setting realistic expectations is critical for good business. I still don't have a good feel for why there is so much trouble with the exchanges. Thank you.

If the CS operation is moved over seas would Americans be excluded from participating because we do not have European addresses or European bank accounts? If we secured a European address and/or bank account is it fair to assume we could remain members of CS?

@Techman2020

I suggest at a minimum payout 1% of all due balances every day Monday thru Friday until everyone is made whole. This would lower the group stress level, keep the market stable, and create coin flow for new plans.

[8:54:20 PM]

Jeremy Reheis

@CSSupport1 question would be all my plans have become due, even P1 is there a way I can create a small payout and roll the rest back into a slow 5% long term cap gain type plan

[8:56:45 PM]

Russ

@techman2020

Hello, this is Russ. Similar to Asa's question, if 1% could not be paid out daily, how about a one time payment either measured at a percentage or 1 BTC maximum?

@techman2020

Hello this is Russ again. With ALT plans converted into dailys some have reported (including myself) that the conversion to BTC was incorrect. I put a support ticket in when weeklys were created and haven't had my plans fixed.

Do you have an ETA as to when those will be addressed?

[8:59:20 PM]

Rick B

@Techman2020 This is RickB. Just curious if all the trading that you are doing now and all the trading that you were doing thru the wee hours of the morning over the weekend is producing just enough coins to meet the obligations due for the new dailies or if it is producing more than enough to allow payouts towards all other outstanding plans? Thanks

Bryan here,

Instead of a podcast, could we get these answers in a FAQ that's posted on the

A W9 is a tax payer identifier and certification stating that we are who we say we are. If CS is reporting investment income, then they will send us a 1099 showing what we have earned. We then report that amount on our tax filings. I don't think CS is reporting that though. My understanding is that we are responsible to report our investment income. Not a CPA or tax attorney so consult your own tax pro.

While we are waiting on a final confirmation from our tax attorney, I'll share what I have dealt with from past experiences. A 1099 is sent annually to an investor based on payouts received against the current fiat at the time of withdrawal. Aka...if you withdraw one coin, and if BTC was $4000 at the time of withdrawal to your wallet, you will be taxed on $4000. This works the same way as stocks and other commodities. To file you will need your 1099 and a 1040 schedule D form. You are required to list your investments in fiat value. And if you are thinking the IRS doesn't get crypto.. be aware, as if this year, you can now receive your tax refunds in Bitcoin.

Circle is required by law to report to the IRS , the amount paid per annum, to its members. A w9 is required so that taxes can be filed appropriately and correctly for the individuals or organizations. Failure failure to report accurately to the IRS, would placeCircle Society in violation of tax law..
And nobody wants that to happen.

Because the IRS classifies cryptocurrency as "property," every exchange of cryptocurrency is a taxable event, even if it does not involve fiat

Once our W-9 has been received. Will we start receiving payments. Or will we be stuck waiting for everyone to submit their W-9s as well.

Also, I understand the coins being withheld by Kucoin not paying out, but how does that hold up our payouts on new coin plans (such as the dailies that were converted) that had nothing to do with the kucoin related funds. It is reasonable to expect that those being new funds should be available for immediate payout once a W-9 is received.

Didn't get a chance to ask during the question time.

Hey guys I submitted a rollover request for one of my expired plans 7 days ago, but havnt heard back nor is it rolled over yet. I know you guys are busy. But would u mind checkin on ticket #8208?

I have another 5 plans that I would also like to roll into endgame, but that is contingent on a response to a question I attached to the rollover request :) I didnt want to open another ticket and risk further delays

Hi Techman

According to your previous podcast, you stated that all plans will be combined to one balance and will be paid perpetually between 1% to 3% (give or take) each day. From my understanding you will start paying that way between June 12th to 15th. Is this still the plan or is there a change of plan on payouts and dates? Also, the dailies have all been paid mostly on time recently. Will these payouts also hit our wallet as fast as the dailies? Thank you Techman, I know even though its been a wait, its worth it! You are the man and shout out to the entire CS team for their hard work!!!

Techman – 1. Can you give priority to correcting balances that have been in error since the new system. Several support request have been submitted. (for someone else, not me)

Admin - I had a year of the Pig expire on 4/29. I did not rollover because I needed to be paid. Now that it has been almost a month I wish I had requested it. Is the payout really scheduled (tentatively) for mid June? If so, I will request the rollover now knowing it will not be paid before then.

On 5/6 I created ticket #7103. On 5/13 I created #7971 checking on the status of the first ticket. On 5/15 I sent an email requesting a status update on my original ticket which generated ticket #8386. Admin in a previous Q and A you said if we hadn't received any feedback on a ticket after 48 hours send an email/ticket for further info. So on 5/17 I sent in an email to "manager@circlesociety.com" asking for an update. I'm getting a bit frustrated here. People I have sponsored have sent in tickets requesting rollovers and been answered during this time frame and had an answer within 24 hours. Could I PLEASE have someone look at my tickets and contact me with any questions. Have I violated a policy? If so I apologize, just looking for some feedback.

[8:09:50 PM]

Hello

@techman2020

My question.

With the new never ending plan I see an issue with payouts. Lets say I have 20btc and with the range of payments mentioned (.1%-3%). If I got the average everyday of 1.5% even after 365 days of payouts my balance is .08 btc.

That over a year too not even get the full 20btc paid to me. That doesn't include growing the account on any days or days where I get less then the average %. How will that keep us investors happy if its gonna take a year to get my coin?

Keep grinding much appreciated!

Second question. On the perpetual plan. What do you see the growth % of our plan daily? Right now we can do some crazy fast growth but this plan is seems to be reducing the growth by a ton.

Third question.

Wouldn't it be easier and make more sense to keep plans going as is and when a plan finishes it gets added to our account balance in which we can request a withdrawl from. That withdrawl goes into a payment mode which pays out 5-10% daily until Finished? Then the account balance that isn't in withdrawl can be rolled into new plans, etc?

[8:10:04 PM]

Hi admin, I have 2 plans called THE Rollover with bots ending May 2 and may 7. When should I see payout to my wallet? Thanks for all you are doing.

Good afternoon.... I have BTC owed to me according to my account. I asked for those coin to be transferred to daily 's. are in the queue in the computer but I admit I dont understand how this all works yet which is why I'm seeking some answers. So 3 questions...#1 - are people still getting P1 payouts every day? Im not seeing people posting this anymore on the feed.#2 - if this is computerized why aren't P1 payouts just running all night long instead of only certain times a day? #3- I realize you may not have enough coin to pay everyone out fast so why not have a payment plan so we can all get at least something?

I have plans that ended may 1st, 3rd, 5th. Seeing how we are in "limbo" why can you not implement rollover buttons for us on all plans so we can roll over our expired plans into the same plan and or another plan of our choosing instead of just Year of Pig and Endgame. This would be no different than us receiving our payment from you and turning around and putting it right back into the system into the plan of our choosing. This way our coin is not just sitting there untill things get back into a normal flow.

Once our W-9 has been received. Will we start receiving payments?(mine was submitted the day it was on the site)

Also, I understand the coins being withheld by Kucoin not paying out, but how does that hold up our payouts on new coin plans (such as the dailies that were converted) that had nothing to do with the kucoin related funds. Is it reasonable to expect that those being new funds should be available for immediate payout once a W-9 is received.

In addition. Can you please have tickets #8227 and #8251 checked. They are in regards to rolling over a plan.

Thank you

[8:23:28 PM]

Riley Schuit

Admin/techman, I'm going to rephrase my question from last time. It sounds like CS needs more staff to answer tickets and technical people to assist you. How can people apply or get involved to be on the team? Many people state not getting answers on tickets and follow ups get unanswered. In my experience, the tickets people _WANT_ to answer, get answered while others stay unanswered(thus people get frustrated). If they need to be escalated, the owner of that ticket simply needs to say something to the requestor.

[8:23:44 PM]

Rob Duncan

Our phase 1 payouts were based on lawyers suggesting that if your account was less than 10 BTC you could withdraw 50%, if it were more than 10 BTC your withdrawal could only be 5%. This decision making was based on keeping the system running solvent and bot performing at its optimum. Was this the case or is this not the case?

Are we able to ever roll existing coin from expired plans to new promotions, plans,or giveaways? Or is this mainly for new coin?

If we don't get paid out by mid June, what will happen then?

@techman2020 For clarity, is it an absolute 100% CS policy from this moment forward that to receive ANYTHING from CS we MUST submit Form W-9 (officially, the "Request for Taxpayer Identification Number and Certification") [1] is used in the United States income tax system by a third party who must file an information return with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). [2] It requests the name, address, and taxpayer identification information of a taxpayer (in the form of a Social Security Number or Employer Identification Number).

The form is never actually sent to the IRS, but is maintained by the individual who files the information return for verification purposes. The information on the Form W-9 and the payment made are reported on a Form 1099.

Like many others, we just want an estimate on payments, and specifically for us, the Balance Due payout time estimate and rollover possibilities.

I believe that paying partial payments to everyone would save you a lot of grief because it would calm everyone down by restoring their faith in cs, knowing that the machine is still operational by something actually happening in lieu of many words repeated.

We contacted support multiple times, at least 72 hours apart asking about rollovers into endgame or another plan with a May 3 start date and the truck with no answer. A rollover button would save you many tickets

Hi Techman, my site never had a balance due. It has "return amount" and dates that are past. I have no roll over button either. Can you please do a written instructions on what I can do from here. How to request withdrawal and what to do if I want to refund lol over but withdraw a portion of the Bitcoin.

@techman2020 I sent 3 tickets in regards to a commission that was not paid March 7th. It has not been paid and no response. How do I handle that issue successfully?

[9:28:34 PM]

Dave Karakas

@techman2020, 2 Questions.

1) When purchasing Plans, each provide the following statement on the purchase page:

"*Payment will be received 24 Business hours after end date"

When will CS be capable of honoring this part of the purchase agreement?

Note: I have a YoP that expired on 4/25. I rolled a portion of it and left some BTC as balance due. The balance due was set to a Est Bot End Date of 5/10 despite actually maturing on 4/25. Its now 5/21 and its unclear when I'll get my balance due payout. This is holding up other investments I would like to be making right now.

2) Since our Dailys were moved into Weeklys, and our Weeklys were moved into Balance Due, why are these not paid within a day or two of maturity? I haven't received a payout since 3/31 and these were all 'Daily' plans.

[9:32:54 PM]

Rick B

@techman2020

When Dailies were introduced for BTC and ETH in March all seemed well and I had a few plans that were paying on time. Life was good. Then the "Solar Flare" hit and caused a major backup/stoppage of payouts. From that, all Dailies were 'Rolled' into Balance Due plans.

Since this was new coin used to buy into those Dailies and not rollover coin, can these be slated for other plan actions, ie payout a percentage of the plan, rollover a percentage, etc. Again, this was new coin and not rollover coin.

Are there any other actions that can be done with these plans besides hurry up and wait, and also get the opportunity to watch other new Dailies be paid while we get to sit on the sidelines?

I believe that many, if not most, will just turn around and join new plans with coins received from a payout.

Techman 2020

Andy Novotny here:

My question:

Is this real? We joined this investment group because we trusted the integrity of the individual who referred us (and still do). As a business owner myself, I know that the success of my business is contingent upon my ability to deliver the goods or services that I'm offering. When I deliver what is expected (promised), I get repeat business and referrals for new clients. Everybody wins. If I don't follow through, I get neither.

I've been told by people who claim to know you that "dishonesty is not in your DNA", and I have been clinging to that. I understand that there are technical issues and/or regulation changes that you encounter that cause hiccups to your business model. Do you have backup plans in place for these situations or are you doing everything "on the fly"?

I want this to work. I want to reinvest. I want to trust that you will do what you say you are going to do when you say that you are going to do it. But I need evidence, consistency. Going forward, will you deliver that? How?

It was my understanding that new plans would be discontinued until the current payouts owed were all caught up. It was said to us that this would help morale. Why are there so many plans offered right now? Thanks

Admin,

Question #1, about support tickets. According to several podcasts, CS support is overwhelmed by support tickets and many members submit the same thing multiple times. My experience is that when I submit a ticket, my webpage doesn't change. Would it be possible to program in a banner or something letting us know the request has been submitted? Would it be possible to receive an email shortly after reaffirming that it was received?

Question #2, about rollover button, is it going to be available soon? This seems to be one of the common requests that I have heard. Might alleviate several support requests.

Thank you.

Would it be a better solution to put support tickets on hold and focus on payouts? Would this eliminate a lot of the support tickets anyway?

Question: Can you please post proof of legal communication exchange between CS and KuCoin. Pretty obvious that people here have worked out that payments by the exchange are advertised to be of larger amounts than are being claimed by CS

Woke up to check this today so might as well add in as well.

The newest daily plan / the one = 200 only sold - advertised as non-delayed like its predecessor that got turned into weekly and halted... this new plan due to small number sold was said to be easily paid in Que... it was super attractive and fail safe, so I bought in :)

Several days late now - I'm sure confidence will be restored shortly since this plan is clearly designed to be quick and focused; thanks team ~ not a fan of chat but my tickets weren't answered and guess this goes here. :heart:
